Our Positions On Latest Local Development

After the overthrow of the dictator and the building of the new Iraqi state, ISCI was distinguished from the rest of the blocs and political parties in the Iraqi arena by a number of guidelines within the political strategy that have been characterized by moderation and flexibility. It has been able to solve the problems and the knots faced by the political process and the national project through initiatives which proved true later in spite of standing of some against them under the pressure of political competition. ISCI was able with its moderation and political intransigence and lack of rigor in attitudes, to close the ranks of the Iraqi political arena at various intellectual and political affiliations, religious, sectarian, and national levels through the provision of the requirements for success. ISCI has played a key and pivotal role contributed in building the institutions of a constitutional state, which have produced the constitution and conducted electoral experiences. whether legislative or provincial elections or municipal districts and other democratic practices that immunized the process from seclusion. Also, ISCI under the current circumstances sees that this stage does not tolerate mistakes and setbacks because it thinks that this current stage is an articulated and an important stage. ISCI sees that its strength is well recognized locally, regionally, and internationally and this will help to strengthen the Iraqi political situation and strengthen the national project. ISCI announced on more than one occasion during its political speeches and statements to the media said that it stands with the legitimate demands of the Iraqi people. ISCI tried with all of its abilities and capacities to resolve this crisis and in harmony with the nature of the rights and legitimate demands of the Iraqi people. -Continued on P. 7

He pointed out that the reluctance of discourse in term of nominating qualified people to the security ministries represents an essential burden that must be overcome as soon as possible. This statement came when Sayed Alhakim hosted the Political-Cultural Forum on Wednesday, April 13, 2011. Sayed Alhakim said that "some of the government leaders still insist on giving priority to their own interests over the interests of the people and giving priorities to their wishes over the legitimate aspirations and liabilities of the people. But, the free will, that does not relent, of our Arab peoples will be able to stand against these leaders, and restore the lost dignity and freedoms that are required for political reforms, and improvement of living conditions. These are areas that must be improved and developed in the Arab world." He noted that the increase in the use of force will be a bad message to those peoples, and contributes to the provocation of these people, he added "The use of armies and power, tanks and repressive equipment in the face of the people is not the appropriate tool to control these situations, but will push People for more alert, cohesion and determination and persistence to achieve their aspirations and their will, that such means will contribute to provoke people more and more and the only way to solve it is to respond to the demands of the people and do the necessary and required reforms." He also expressed his deep condolences to the blood that has been shed "We express our condolences for each drop of innocent blood being shed on any land, from the Arab countries and everywhere. We express our solidarity and sympathy for these people in defending their rights and their demands and our wishes for them to achieve these legitimate ambitions through the solid relationship between the peoples and regimes that believe in freedom and dignity and democracy. He added "There is no room for some regimes, but to obey the will of the people and carry out the necessary reforms is needed to rid themselves and their peoples and countries of complications and more bloodshed." He addressed the officials in the Iraqi government, by saying: "The officials in Iraq also are included in this, and they have to communicate more with our people, and the Iraqi officials have to have a culture of listening to people and learn about their demands, and to speed up to meet these demands and these requirements as soon as possible." He warned of the complacency of the government by saying: "The most serious cases when people lose the confidence in the administrator and are questioning the credibility of the promises made to them. With this the gap widens between the official and the citizen. This will have a serious and negative impact on the country's stability and on the national cohesion that is required for the success of our new political system." In another context, Sayed Alhakim spoke about the actions carried out by our armed forces at Camp Ashraf and the return of land belonging to the citizens that were within the camp, which was seized by the former regime. He also criticized the U.S. position on these measures, and considered it as a policy of double standards, by saying: "The United States and a number of European countries express concern about the situation that affects a number of terrorists, you know that the MKO is a terrorist organization, as stated on the Terrorist lists of many countries of the world, including the U.S. But, not one of these countries stands and expresses concern about what the Iraqi people or the Iraqi armed forces are suffering from as they have a natural right in this process. What is surprising is the double standards. Talking about human rights and talking about the commitment to international laws of the countries."

ISCI Perspective

The most prominent positions taken by ISCI at the local and regional levels are as follows:

1- The internal position: ISCI does not hesitate to show its support for any initiative as long as it is in the interest of the Iraqi people. It also encourages the return to a government of national partnership that is back on track to secure the demands of the Iraqi people, whether political or security or service, economic, and declares its support to the Prime Minister and his current government. This is if all political partners stick to their promises and their platforms, which they announced before the elections; otherwise it will withdraw its support if the government has not fulfilled its promises and covenants. ISCI demands strongly the transformation of national initiative into laws and draft laws and activate it to make it a road map. One that will attain more achievements that contribute to building state institutions and serve the interests of Iraqis. ISCI also affirms the development of its relations with the National Alliance and the rest of the components and especially with the Islamic Dawa Party, especially at the level of ongoing meetings between the leaders of both parties. ISCI has repeatedly declared that it is against the idea of disabling the parliament. ISCI encourages the Council of Representatives in the formation of a number of specialized committees to satisfy the legal debate until the legislation meet with the highest degree of acceptability by the Iraqi street. ISCI sees also that provincial councils should be granted greater powers and strongly supports the Constitution's article 121, which gives regional authorities the right to exercise legislative and executive powers and jurisdiction in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, except what has been stated related to the exclusive powers of the federal authorities. ISCI confirms that its s not opposed to the government in the sense of opposition and not with the government in the same sense, and stands against the slack and stresses on the criteria for the selection of ministers (Efficiency - Integrity - Professionalism - nationality - administrative capacity, etc. ...). Additionally, ISCI supports the withdrawal of Dr Adel Abdul Mahdi's nomination as Senior Vice President. This position is not an ascetic job, but because of procrastination and delay in the vote on Vice-President of the Republic he has proffered his withdrawal. We are with what the Iraqi people want regarding the legislation of the law of the salary scale to eliminate differences and end the immorality of class that appeared to eyewitnesses in the chaos of the privileges and high salaries.

2 - The regional situation: ISCI thinks that the concepts of reform and change and development, democracy and peaceful transfer of power and holding elections and constitutional amendments gives equal opportunities for all citizens to express their views in the choice of running their own affairs. Because Iraq was at the forefront of countries in the region work in accordance with these concepts and moving steadily with its national reform agenda it supports the rights of others to do the same. Thus, ISCI stands with people who want freedom and democracy and the sharing of power peacefully and its positions: declaring its solidarity and standing by the brotherly Libyan people in their distress and revolution and to wish them victory in achieving their aspirations to form a government that would achieve its freedom, justice and political reforms and proper living conditions, and recall the importance that the international community bears the full responsibility to save the lives of innocent people in Libya. Also, ISCI was surprised that the Libyan Transitional Council has not been recognized by the Iraqi government. ISCI also sees that Yemen's President should reconsider his decisions, and give the Yemeni people the opportunity to form a government that reflects their aspirations; this after suffering for more than thirty years. ISCI believes that the duty of the leadership in Syria and Jordan to commit themselves to meet the demands of the two brotherly peoples as legitimate demands of its political reforms and living conditions. The leadership in Syria and Jordan must listen to their people and solve their problems and restore things to their proper context and to achieve more stability in the Arab world. ISCI does not believe that the military machine, pressure, and abuse of citizens in the State of Bahrain could be a solution to the problem, but the solution lies in peaceful dialogue and construction. Dialogue which is based on a substantive rule accepted by the Bahraini people, and that establishing a distinction between citizens in Bahrain is a serious approach that would have complications and negative impact on the desired processors.

ISCI's Development Movement, Why and how?

ISCI launched after two decades of incorporation outside its home and after fighting the dictatorship for more than a decade. Its Interior development initiative for the development of the internal construction of its structures and its work in the political field and its movement toward believing in the need for renewal and change and development in line with the requirements of the current situation and the current variables. The changes came after ISCI undertook an internal review of an extensive study of the causes and factors that led ISCI to lose its electoral production sectors including agriculture, industry, tourism and services. He said this in a speech during a meeting with a group of university students and workers in the social and feminist activist movement. The meeting was held on Tuesday, April 5, 2011. The VP said that "the phenomenon of unemployment cannot be not solved through the issue of appointments in institutions and government departments, though it is the only way under the current circumstances, but through activating the private sector that is able to absorb the largest number of manpower and professional and scientific skills." He stressed that the country cannot rely on oil resources forever, especially since oil production is subjected to change depending on the circumstances, as well as prices, which requires us to look for other ways to diversify sources of income and activate other productive sectors. He said that the unemployment and the vacuum have negative effects on society, especially among the youth and students. He confirmed the importance of developing programs to combat negative phenomena by smoking, drugs, and deviant behavior, and activate the role of humanitarian and social development organizations in this area.

President Of Kurdistan Contacts VP Mahdi

blocs. By paving the ground necessary to initiate development programs it would provide services to citizens and meet their aspirations in security and stability, health, education and employment. The two sides discussed the recent visit of the Turkish Premier, Mr. Erdogan to Iraq last week and agreed that this visit will help strengthen relations of cooperation between the two countries in various fields. The results of the visit will benefit the two neighboring peoples, and in the service of stability in the region. It would also contribute to the provision of vital services to citizens, and prompt the development of infrastructure in the country. #### Our National Constants

ISCI has been recognized, since the early days of its formation, for developing political and field plans and programs within a clearly defined strategy defined the basis of national principles. ISCI has formed a package of basic premises in its political and cultural work. Through these constants, ISCI has a distinct role and is able to close the ranks of the Iraqi national forces and stands at the forefront of all these forces to build a new experience for the new Iraq. These constants that ISCI promotes are:

1-Building state constitutional institutions: After the defeat of one-party government, ISCI contributed actively in building the new civilized state and was able to start in co-operation with other political powers to build a state of constitutional institutions through the establishment of a permanent constitution for the country and the protection of it based on the law.

national and 2-Independence sovereignty: ISCI did not consider that outside powers would overthrow the former regime, but it had demanded during its fighting against the former regime the international community to protect the Iraqi people. ISCI had said that if that protection was given to Iraqi people, then the Iraqi people would have been able to take the initiative. Therefore, ISCI chose the protection of full national sovereignty and remove Iraq from Chapter 7 of the UN Charter. The late Sayed Abdel Aziz al Alhakim was the first to ask for lifting Chapter 7 sanctions for independence and full national sovereignty, and this constant was able to spare the Iraqi people further havoc. Perhaps it goes without saying that ISCI was among the first to ask the United Nations and the Security Council to consider the resolution 688 as a way to prevent violations against human rights in Iraq as binding.

3-National Partnership: ISCI stressed in its political discourse another national constant; the assertion that the Iraqi people, the multi-colors and shades of nationalism.. -Continued on P. 8

build the nation and the state. We were able - as political forces and popular masses to rid our country of tyranny... The people voted in the process of a historic referendum to uphold a permanent constitution and legislative elections marked the beginning of the way for sweeping reforms... We were able through state positions and the presidency to achieve results, certainly incomplete, but important enough to give our people broad rights, in a time when there are many people elsewhere still trying to achieve those same rights. We have worked together to rid Iraq of the provisions of the blockade, sanctions, and return Iraq to a state of normalcy, before the decision of UN resolution No. 661 of 1990, which followed the invasion of Kuwait ... And the decision to end the occupation of 1483... And rid Iraq of a heavy debt that has crippled it and its supreme interests... And we were able to stand firm against terrorism and put forward the building blocks to agree on the exit of foreign troops at the end of 2011... These are historic achievements, despite the continuation of a lot of difficulties and obstacles and inequities and gaps. Through all those difficult days, the Presidency of the Republic was able to play the role of safety valve. Whether in the difficult conditions experienced by the country internally, which brought the country to the brink of civil war, or in the normalization of relations with the countries of the world. Especially with neighboring countries, considering all the complexities and known difficulties and overlapping legacies.

My brother, Mr. President... Thank you for your high confidence in your request that we continue - Mr. Alhashimi and me - in the exercise of our duties as Vice Presidents of the Republic... Also thank you for your nomination of us for this high office because it indicates your great trust in us. But, after in-depth thought considering the courses of things and diagnosis of the general interests of the country, I have reached a clear conviction that I will not be able to perform my duties and responsibilities towards you and our people properly. So I ask your Excellency to withdraw my candidacy for this post, with my full appreciation to you and to all political and national forces that supported this nomination. Mr. President... Despite the harsh political action in Iraq and the required enormous moral and physical sacrifices, I do not find for myself any choice but to continue to consider myself as a low-ranking soldier and serve our people and their issues. I was dismissed from my high school in 1957, after I participated in the tripartite aggression of the 1956 demonstrations. I was fourteen years old and I was fully engaged and to this day continue in the service of the issues of the public ... I did not stop working for one day. I was on the run, imprisoned, convicted, tortured in the Iraqi Marshlands and its cities and in the mountains of Kurdistan. I was tortured as an exile and immigrant. I continued to demonstrate and raise arms and write articles and give speeches and encourage discourse and sit-ins; I liaison with States, to support our people and lift the injustices that have been done to them. I am proud that I spent more than half a century in this bitter struggle... We did not achieve all ambitions of our people. The road is still long ... But we - in turn - have spared no effort and we were able - through the great sacrifices ahead of us, martyrs and our brothers and our people - to lay established foundations which will carry us through a many turns and difficulties. But, it's a clear path and its goals are well known and will bring pride and prosperity and glory and progress for our people, God willing.

Mr. President... I wish you and the rest of our brothers a multitude of health, calling Almighty God to crown your work with success, he listens and responds. May peace and God's mercy and blessings be upon you.

Sheikh Hamoudi Issues Statement

Sheikh Hamoudi, the Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee in the Council of Representatives, stressed on stability and progress of Iraq towards the goals set forward, despite the challenges it faces and that it has become among the most stable countries in the region. He pointed out that the suffering experienced by the Iraqi people in the previous period made everyone move in one direction and no one wanted to reverse the gains that have been made. Sh. Hamoudi said that the delay in forming the government has brought us to common convictions where we expressed them through the initiative of Mr. Barazani that we should put hand in hand and that there should be a post between the religious, sectarian, and political forces.

He added "that Iraq has offered to be a mediator to resolve the crisis between the Authority in Bahrain and the people." He pointed out that Aliragiah List, which represents the majority Sunni Muslims in Iraq are the ones who called for a day of disruption in the Council of Representatives in solidarity with what is happening in Bahrain and signed an agreement with the National Alliance and the Kurdistan Alliance to issue a joint statement in this regard. Sheikh Hamoudi said that the important point is that we do not want from the events of Bahrain to be reflected negatively on Iraq, and this experiment represents an important step forward. Sheikh Hamoudi said that what appears from the slogans of Arab demonstrators is that their demands are common in many countries in the region. He stressed that the rulers must change the picture so as not to get caught up in the circle of blame as happened in Bahrain when the Bahraini Foreign Minister accused the demonstrations of being Shiite movement against the Sunnis and accusing it of sectarianism and turning it into a sectarian battle just like when Gaddafi accused the protesters of being terrorists. The chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee stressed on the importance of the stability in Syria and its impact on Iraq.

ISCI Perspective

...and sectarianism and religious cannot be ruled by one party or one sect, but ISCI sees that all of Iraq's citizens are interested in building the new Iraq. This constant managed to picks up the pieces and set off toward the prospects for national unity in a pluralistic democratic federal constitutional system away from the exclusion and marginalization of any component of the Iraqi people.

4-Security and Services: ISCI sees that the most important issue facing the new Iraqi state is the provision of security, stability and the delivery of services to the Iraqi people. Perhaps this constant is a suitable ground to solve all the problems and crises experienced by the Iraqi people. Current circumstances experienced by Iraqi citizens, especially these days, including a preoccupation with security, which fell seriously recently, ISCI sees that a delay in naming ministers of the security services is a major obstacle to the stability of Iraq. Therefore ISCI is calling for putting forward plans that would be able to stop the bloodshed and the pursuit of the enemies of the political process who are still conducting crimes against innocent people.

5-Opening up to regional international levels: ISCI has defined this constant by opening up positively to all states in the region and the international community on the basis of sovereign, economic and cultural symmetry. This is needed in order to build sophisticated and integrated relations with these countries to serve the interests of the Iraqi people and to take care of the policy of good neighborliness and non-interference in the affairs of Arab and Islamic countries. ISCI confirmed clearly the need to build positive relations with the countries of the region and the world within the system of common interests, and Iraq can later build these evolving relations with neighboring Arab and Islamic nations as well as other international partners to achieve the economic cooperation and cultural exchange and through the "Dialogue Among Civilizations" theory as a substitute for the so-called clash of civilizations, which ends to poisoning the atmosphere of good relations.

6-Support civil society organizations: ISCI thinks that the formation of civil society organizations on a national basis is the cornerstone for its materialization and success. The cultivation of a society not based on sectarian, ethnic and regional perspectives. This polarization destroyed the social fabric of Iraq during the rule of the previous tyrannical regime. The sense of belonging to the homeland is the only principle that is capable of ridding Iraq of the polarization of sectarianism. We believe in ISCI that the unions, tribes and other organizations are the foundation of civil society organizations and make their loyalty to the homeland and the country something that is separate from the ethnic, regional, and sectarian connotations. The freedom of expression and opinion is guaranteed by the Iraqi constitution and this freedom will give these organizations the right to participate actively in political life, away from any tutelage of the party or the government or a component while maintaining the privacy that are not harmful to the national march of the Iraqi people.

7-Communication with the People: ISCI has not stopped for one day throughout its political work, from dealing with the nation, to inform the citizens. ISCI has taken to the streets of Iraq to meet and communicate with the nation. But it was the bulk of its attention and approach towards the communication with the nation of all components and to repair whatever was destroyed by the previous regime. We believe that our closeness to the nation and the work that is being done in communities across the country will create reasons for the return of their legitimate rights as a national and moral duty because we are all from this nation.
